Excerpt: .about the area, and in your magnificence--and while, as I hear from Mr. Bowden to-day, you have been getting rich, and piling up the coin--Methodism sends to that land and to that immense area four men--to those millions of people, with those diversities of tongues, and those thousands of miles to travel; and when we go express, we do it at two miles an hour, with ten oxen. Do not send to me to retrench, for I will not do it. It is little enough you have given us so far, and I do not know how you would have given us anything but for good Mr. Harvey. If you want anybody to retrench in this interior mission, I will become a supernumerary, and will get a snug berth at home. You know, though we are but few men in that district, I was afraid the Missionary Committee would have a balance on the wrong side to-day, for they have positively sent me out two men to reinforce the staff, and the only comfort about it is this: that the quality of the men makes up for the smallness of the quantity. I had not been long in the Transvaal before I discovered that God had been preparing our way, that He had been opening the doors for the third and the last time for Methodism, and I had hardly got myself settled in Pretoria before the tidings flashed through the land, by means of...
