Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Ancient Use of the Greek Accents in Reading and Chanting: With Some Newly Restored Greek Melodies This rule was not only used by Greeks in speaking the language of their time, but was a rule of pronunciation common both to the Greek and Latin languages, so that there was no need of special instruction in that particular, whether the persons to be instructed were Greeks or foreigners. The accents were devised to show exceptions to the general rule, and to point out those syllables in a word which required a stress to be laid upon them which the general rule would not meet. The general rule of the Greek pronunciation rests upon the principle common to all languages, that a stress of voice is succeeded by an unaccented syllable. Thus in English, when we use monosyllables, we use alternate positions for the accents, as in it came to pass. In long words such as in understanding, handkerchief, the same rule holds good, nor docs the rule alter when we use foreign words, such as bibliography, permanganate of potash. The Greek rule is that a stress of voice must be placed upon the last syllable of every word and upon all monosyllables. The importance attached to the right use of particles in Greek arises from the special attention which was always paid to the pronunciation of monosyllables. All words are by rule Barytones. Should a word have more than two syllables, the next preceding stress must be put upon the antepenult, and other stresses upon alternate syllables preceding the antepenult. This rule is supported somewhat by the authority of Aristotle, who wrote, our common conversation...
